SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS LOWER COURT'S DECISION

Whereby Silver Peak Mines Company Will Have to Give Heavy Bond Pending Final Settlement of Case.

The supreme court on Saturday afternoon decided the appeal in the famous Silver Peak mining suit in which the Wrights, F. S. Chadbourne and B. A. Gamble are attempting to secure control of eleven-fifteenths of the famous Silver Peak mines at Blair from the Silver Peak Mines company, Hanchett, et al.

The decision of the supreme court sustains the decision of Judge Pike of the district court and removes the temporary restraining order secured by the defendants against the district court when an appeal was taken to the supreme court. The decision now gives Judge Pike of the district court the right to issue a writ of assistance giving the plaintiffs, Chadbourne, Gamble, et al., the possession of the mine or to make the defendants, the Silver Peak Mines company, et al., put up a bond, in order to continue working the mine until the amount of damages sustained by the plaintiff has been determined.

The plaintiffs demanded that the defendants give a bond of $1,500,000 and it was due to this demand that the matter got into the supreme court.

Following the decision by Judge Pike, which gave the plaintiffs, Chadbourne, Gamble, et al., title to the property, they were given an eleven-fifteenths of the mine the plaintiffs asked for a writ of assistance from the district court in order to get possession.

The defendant claimed that the district court had lost jurisdiction and that the district judge could not assume a writ of assistance or fix the bond in the matter. The defendants, the Silver Peak Mines company, secured a temporary restraining order against the district court, restraining the district court from issuing the writ of assistance or fixing the bond. Defendants also asked for a writ of prohibition against the district court and the plaintiff's demurred to this writ of prohibition and it was on the demurrer that the supreme court decided the question.

The supreme court in its decision lifts the restraining order and gives the district court the alternative of issuing a writ of assistance or fixing a bond. It also denies the petition for a writ of prohibition, made by defendant, the Silver Peak Mines company.

It is understood that this decision will not in any way affect the Pittsburg-Silver Peak company, the present operators of the property. When they purchased the mines from the heirs of the Blair estate, who were the former owners of the property, they were given a bond which protects them from all loss.

Directors of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines company will hold the next quarterly meeting of that company in San Francisco Thursday, August 25, for the purpose of declaring another dividend. The disbursement will probably be at the same rate that has prevailed on the last three, at 30 cents regular and an extra 20 cents per share. The treasury of the company now contains more than $2,000,000 cash, and this is being added to at a rate that will bring it up to nearly double that figure when the next dividend is paid.

The company has paid into the sheriff's office $51,437.13 as bullion tax for the quarter ending June 30. The statement filed therewith shows a production of 36,826 tons of ore, the gross yield of which was $2,789,342. Cost of extraction was $351,388.33; transportation $14,403.18; reduction, $679,918.72; net yield, $1,743,631.77.

WORK OF PROSPECTOR VERSUS THE GEOLOGIST

Pioneer work on mineral deposits in a new field is, as a rule, done by the prospector. The geologist does not pose as a pioneer; he is not looking for bonanzas; he is in search of information that may be of wide general use and in the search he merely takes the larger ascertainable facts, studies their significance, and in his report groups them in an orderly way, so that even in his reconnaissance work he lays the foundation for thorough scientific study of the region he explores. For some of his purposes an old abandoned mine without economic value may be of great service; it may show the manner in which valuable ores occur typically; it may show their mineral associations and mode of origin; it may indicate the kind of country rock that will probably contain a deposit of a particular nature. On the other hand, his work may develop facts that seem to have no immediate practical application, but that may in time—very short time, perhaps—become of great economic importance.—Mining and Scientific Press.

BLACK BUTTE CASE IN GOLDFIELD COURT

The case of L. L. Patrick versus J. G. McKay, E. A. Byler and Ben Gill, an action brought to nullify the election of directors of the Diamondfield Black Butte Re-organized Mining company, is
